Page 1: Half-Title

Pages 1

Illustration Note

Quiet opening image fragment: hat brim, stone texture, or moonlit road detail.

Full Spread

Captain Daniel and the Hungry Winter

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Page 2: Copyright

Page 2: Copyright

Pages 2

Illustration Note

Minimal spot art or open space.

Full Spread

Copyright / publication page

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Page 3: Title Page

Page 3: Title Page

Pages 3

Illustration Note

Young Daniel introduced before the conflict fully begins.

Full Spread

Captain Daniel and the Hungry Winter

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Page 4: Silent Lead-In

Pages 4

Illustration Note

Empty road between high stone walls before the story begins.

Full Spread

Silent image

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 1

Pages 5-6

Illustration Note

Snowy or barren winter camp, soldiers hunched against wind, muted palette, immediate feeling of cold.

Left Page

Winter was hard on the soldiers. The wind cut through their coats.

Right Page

The ground was cold. The days were long. And the food was almost gone.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 2

Pages 7-8

Illustration Note

Use the established Book 1 visual language.

Left Page

Daniel Cook and the men in his company had marched and watched and waited through hunger that seemed to follow them everywhere.

Right Page

At first they had horse beef. When that was gone, they searched for anything else they could eat.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 3

Pages 9-10

Illustration Note

Sparse searching scene, men in bleak landscape, empty hands, no game, no relief.

Left Page

But no dogs or any kind of meat could be found.

Right Page

Still the hunger stayed. It pressed and ached and would not let go.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 4

Pages 11-12

Illustration Note

Stark campfire scene with a boot or shoe near flame, soldiers gaunt and weary, handled with restraint rather than shock.

Left Page

At last the men grew so desperate they roasted their shoes and ate them.

Right Page

Even that was not enough.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 5

Spread 5

Pages 13-14

Illustration Note

Use the established Book 1 visual language.

Left Page

Faces grew hollow. Steps grew slow. Tempers grew short.

Right Page

The soldiers were hungry in the morning. Hungry at noon. Hungry again by night.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 6

Pages 15-16

Illustration Note

Captain addressing exhausted men by low winter light; this quote should land clearly and simply.

Left Page

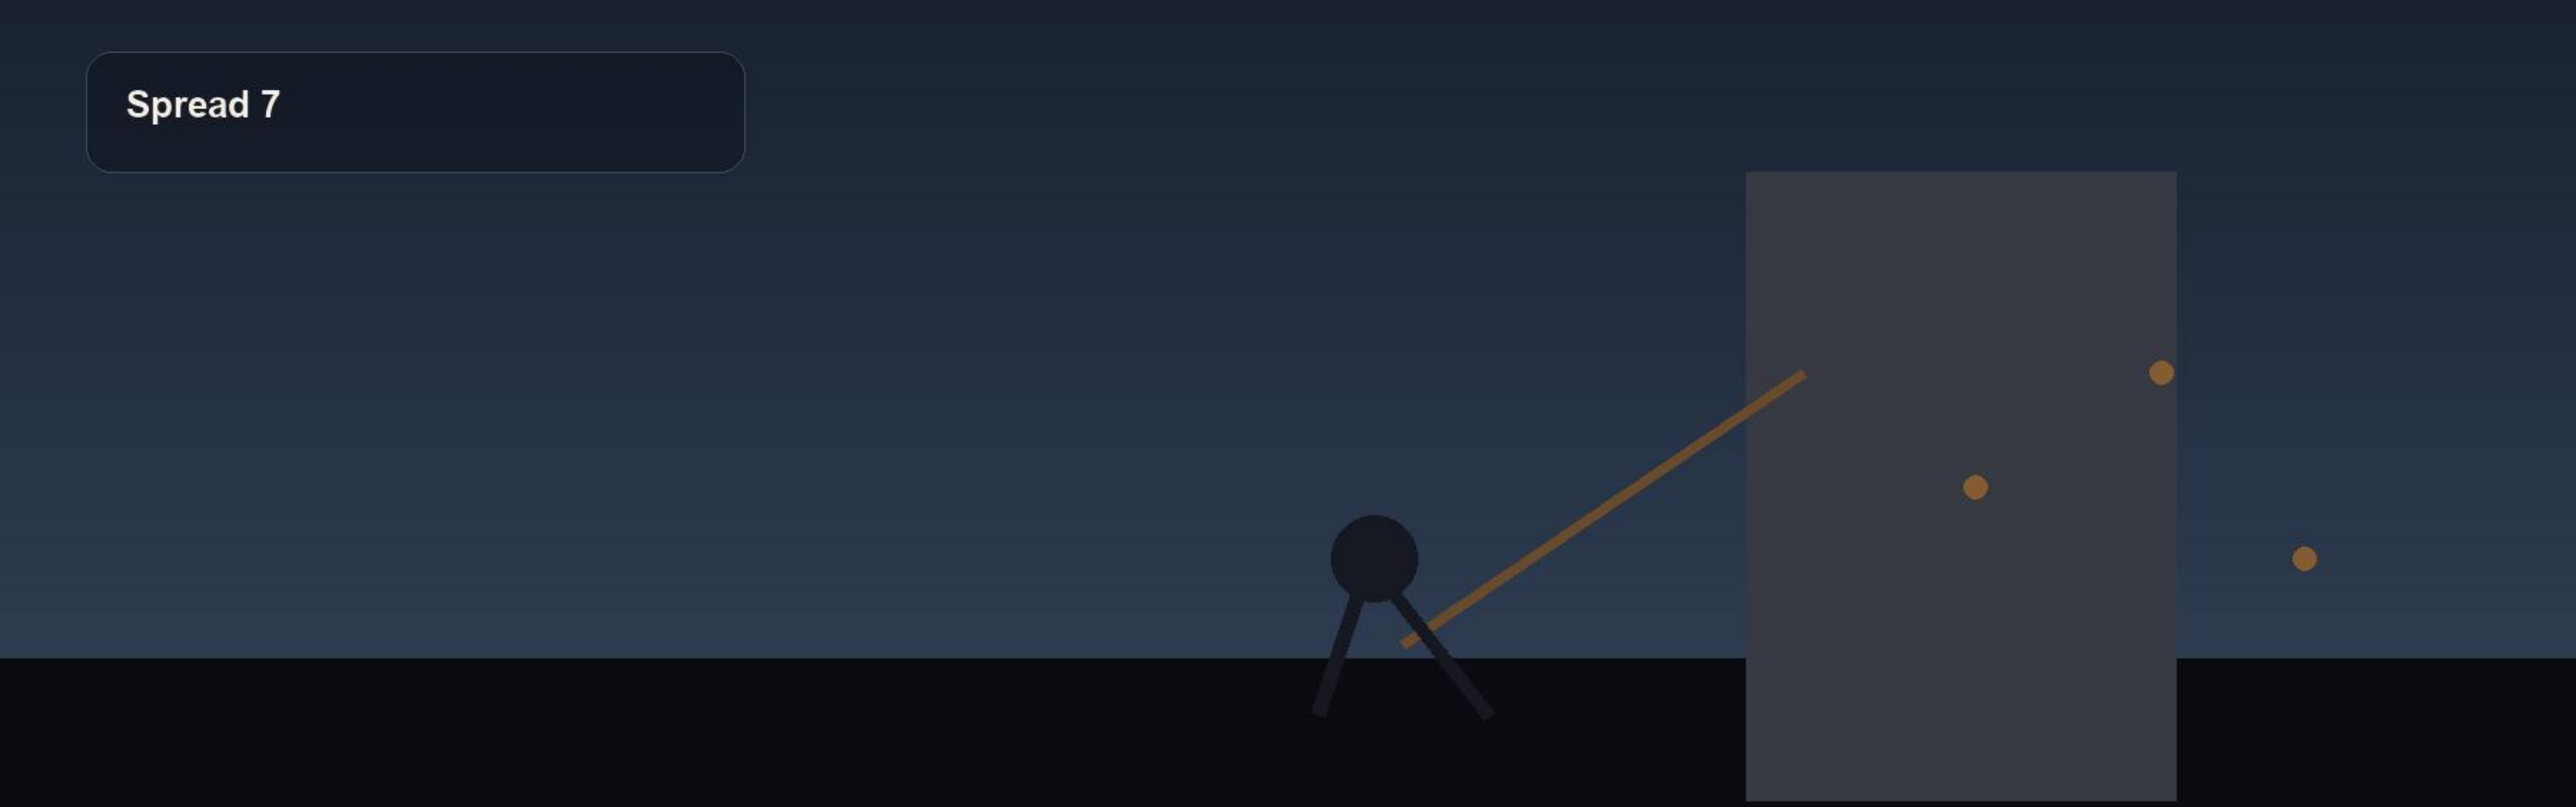
At last their captain spoke.

Right Page

"Go out and take some Tory's chickens," he said, "or anything you can find."

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 7



Spread 7

Pages 17-18

Illustration Note

Use the established Book 1 visual language.

Left Page

The men knew of a Tory nearby. He had food. But he would sell none.

Right Page

So the soldiers made their plan. They would go quietly. They would go carefully. They would go in the dark.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 8

Pages 19-20

Illustration Note

Split focus between Daniel holding watch and shadowy figures moving toward a distant Tory property.

Left Page

Daniel was chosen to stand guard.

Right Page

The others moved ahead through the night. The air was sharp and still.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 9

Spread 9

Pages 21-22

Illustration Note

Use the established Book 1 visual language.

Left Page

Somewhere far off, a branch cracked. No one spoke. No one laughed.

Right Page

Hunger had taken all the extra words.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 10

Pages 23-24

Illustration Note

Quiet guard scene, Daniel alert in darkness while the mission stays mostly off-page.

Left Page

Daniel listened. He watched. He waited.

Right Page

The men were not looking for glory. They were looking for supper.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 11

Spread 11

Pages 25-26

Illustration Note

Use the established Book 1 visual language.

Left Page

War could be that way. One day brought musket fire and bullets.

Right Page

Another brought an empty stomach and a long cold dark.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 12

Spread 12

Pages 27-28

Illustration Note

Use the established Book 1 visual language.

Left Page

Still the soldiers went on. Still they watched. Still they obeyed.

Right Page

Because morning always came, whether there was food enough to meet it or not.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 13

Pages 29-30

Illustration Note

Wide night scene, Daniel and the soldiers moving forward into darkness, small against winter land.

Full Spread

And that night, Daniel Cook went out into the dark with the others--

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...

Spread 14

Pages 31-32

Illustration Note

Very simple final image, soldiers disappearing into the dark or faint dawn, emphasizing endurance rather than triumph.

Full Spread

hoping they might find enough to keep marching one more day.

Prompt seed: Painterly historical realism for a children's Revolutionary War picture book. Young Daniel Cook, visibly teenage and vulnerable rather than heroic, in blue-gray night ton...