Narrow road, tall stone walls, moonlight, young Daniel and another soldier walking.

Left Page

Before he was a captain, before years had lined his face, Daniel Cook was a young soldier walking a dark road.

Right Page

The moon slipped behind the clouds. Wind pressed against the tall stone walls on either side. Even the night seemed to be waiting.

Daniel and one other soldier had been sent ahead to scout. "Quiet," Daniel whispered. Their boots crunched on gravel.

Then the crunching stopped. Thirty shadows rose slowly from behind the wall.

"Surrender!" the shadows shouted. In that instant, Daniel moved. He lifted his musket. He aimed at the largest figure. He fired.

The flash split the darkness. For one frozen heartbeat, the world stood still. Then it exploded.
